

Arroyo Zarabanda

From:
MTN25
1071-IV

LINKS

GPS trail

Video

Larger map

1 The route takes a right turn here to descend to the Las Hoyas stream.

Getting there

General

Profile

Difficulty level:
Moderate.

Conditions: 900 ft descent and ascent, good surfaces.

This 7 mile route starts at the A-377 on a track opposite to the route to the Canuto de la Utrera. It descends 1.8 miles and 650 feet where it turns right onto a track which descends to cross the Las Hoyas stream. The route then runs parallel to the stream until reaching the floodplain of the River Guadiaro, where it turns left along the Los Pescadores path and proceeds in a southerly direction. After 1.2 miles there is another left turn to the northeast. This follows the Zarabanda stream which is flanked by reed-beds, wild olive trees, cork oaks and areas of Mediterranean vegetation. This track takes us back to the place where we had turned towards the Las Hoyas stream. Here we retrace our steps uphill to the starting point on the A-377. This route is characterised by abundant vegetation: gall oaks, wild olive trees and large areas of land dedicated to citrus trees. There are great views across to the river during the descent and ascent.