The climate: winters are mild and the summers hot and dry. Most of the rain falls between November and March. In the winter daytime temperatures can still get to 15° to 20°, though they can fall substantially at night. In the height of summer, daytime temperatures reach over 30°. Hence the months of October through May are the most agreeable to the majority of walkers.

Preparations for walking: Waterproofs during the winter months; layers of clothing especially when in higher altitudes; stout walking boots with good treads and good ankle support are advisable for the rough, steep or slippery surfaces on some of the walks; walking poles, which can be a great help on some of the ascents and descents; a good supply of water, particularly in the warmer months; sun block and a hat; the relevant maps; a GPS for using the trails and coordinates provided with these walks.

Select walks that suit your physical condition.

The maps on the next two pages show the location of the walks. Following them are pages for each walk with map, description, profile, statistics, and walking conditions. There are also links (clickable and QR code) to: a larger map; a GPS track of the route and where necessary from Casares to the beginning of the route; a video of the walk; and, for general reference, this Information page.

A further selection of guided walks can be arranged with the Tourist Centre.

The maps used are from the Mapa Topográfico Nacional de España. The MTN50 1071 map refers to the 1:50000 Jimena de la Frontera sheet; the MTN25 I to IV maps refer to the four 1:25000 sheets that cover that area. Map gridlines and all map references cited refer to WGS84 and the UTM projection as used, for example, in Google Earth. To apply them, settings in GPS equipment and supporting software will need adjustment to this basis. All gridlines are 1 km apart.

While on a walk: please leave everything as you found it, and take your litter home. Please don't camp or light fires, pick plants, disturb the wildlife, or take rocks or minerals. Please close gates after you; these often take the form of a fence secured on one side by one or two moveable wire loops.

We have tried to make these notes as accurate and safe as possible. However circumstances can change and we can accept no responsibility for any loss, inconvenience or injury sustained while using these notes. Fresh information and comments are always welcome and can be addressed to info@ecotourcasares.com.

Thanks to the Ayuntamiento of Casares for its help and the use of its materials, and to the Instituto Geográfico Nacional for the use of its maps.

Enjoy Casares Walks!
